A party has been in the Northwest for some time, on last night for Chicago, where they will enter the Michigan Central R. R. for London, Toronto, and Montreal.

The Michigan Central route was selected because it is said to be the best by far from Chicago to Canadian points.

This line runs five express trains daily from Chicago to Canada, three on Sundays, and two of them, the 3.30 p.m. and 5.15 p.m. trains, are accompanied by 100 men, including Steering Car men, to Chicago on the 3.30 p.m. train, so that these trains have the most cars to Canadian points. Through tickets are on sale to all these points, and baggage will be checked through.

FREE GRANT LANDS

are disposed of on exactly the same terms as if coming direct from the Government. The Company's lands are in a direct line of a railway now under construction, and are being made as easy of access to the settler as possible. Steamers of the Northern Navigation Co. will run to the company's lands to Strathallan and beyond.

water upon them, a great advantage over land now attainable on the line of the G. R. R. and the railway in reaching these will be soon easily made, so that seed of all kinds can be had at Strathallan on favorable terms from the company.

WAGER $500.00

To Whom it May Concern.

During the thunderstorm in August, 1882, the County of Middlesex, Ont., alone suffered to the extent of from $50,000 to $85,000 in the destruction of dwelling, barns and outbuildings. Not one of the structures consumed was furnished with rods from the Globe Lightning Rod Company of London, although there are thousands and thousands of feet of our rods erected upon the farm houses and barns in Middlesex Co., and over 10,000 being erected within the city limits alone during the past two years, the statements of a few weeks ago to the contrary notwithstanding. The Globe Company, in order to show their confidence in the goods manufactured and sold by them, are prepared to place the sum of $500,000 in the hands of His Worship the Mayor (or any other responsible citizen in London), against a similar amount of deposited by any person or persons who can prove, that a building provided with suitable rods from the Globe Company has been struck during either of the recent thunderstorms which have visited Western Ontario. The money to be divided between the different charitable institutions in Brandon. Orders by mail promptly attended to.

Mr. and Mrs. Spoopendyke.

"Now, my star," said Mrs. Spoopendyke, gathering up her skirts and shaking for the door: "now, my dear, we are all ready, are we? You take those pots of plants and I'll carry the cut flowers."

"How'm I to take thirteen pots of plants in two hands?" growled Mr. Spoopendyke, surveying his job with dissatisfaction in his eyes.

"What is there about me that seems to give you the impression that I am a freight train? What do you call these things, anyway? What's this ghost standing up here with a candle in his hand? What particular interest has he got in the Easter business? How'm I going to carry these things? That's what I want to know."

"That's a silly lily, dear," replied Mrs. Spoopendyke, laying down her flowers and running to help her husband. "Now, you can take these pots in your arms by letting the edge of one pot rest on the edge of another. Let me show you," and Mrs. Spoopendyke arranged the pots, neatly folded in clean white paper, in her husband's arms. "That's the way to carry them," she chattered, opening the door for him. "Now, you are all right."

"Spare me to put on my hat with my hands, dear!" implored Mr. Spoopendyke, trying to speak seriously so that he might not attract the butler. "I hope you think I don't need any decoration while I'm carrying these old ghost shrubs! May be you think I'd present a more tropical appearance without my hat?"

"I'll put on your hat, my dear," replied Mrs. Spoopendyke, and she carefully put on his side, buttoned and buttoned it down and the "ghost shrub" as she called it, rested on his shoulders. "Now you're all right, dear, beautiful of the flowers."

Mr. Spoopendyke followed his wife to the staircase and the butler a sort of hush to himself.

"Please look here," he cried to his wife, "you don't look we straight! These things are slipping! Fix 'em can't you?"

"We haven't far to go," pleaded Mrs. Spoopendyke, who couldn't see that anything was wrong. "Can't you hold them dear, till we get to church?"

"I can't hold 'em!" squealed Mr. Spoopendyke, "out of my eye! I can't you take 'em! I'll fly out of my eye! Look out for my hat! Don't you see it's slipping?"

"You don't make some better arrangement than these things, the neighbors will be scared by the cracking of crockery."

"I hope you won't break any of them," sighed Mrs. Spoopendyke. Then she pulled him over his eyes and took him by the hand to lead him away.

"Please out!" yelled Mr. Spoopendyke, as he ran a long way. "Here's a decoration in here! Catch it if you don't want to lose a dozen of this decoration. Catch it, catch it!"

The Mrs. Spoopendyke was too late. The pot dropped with a crash on Mr. Spoopendyke's instep and rolled into the other.

"There you are," noted Mr. Spoopendyke, dropping with pain and dropping another pot, satisfied now. "Know any one you want to look against for a Garden of Eden? Got any more horticultural societies you want knocked out?" Here goes another! and the rest of the series crashed on the sidewalk. "A charge I have to keep," and down came the largest pot of the lot with a prodigious bang.

"Dang it!" squealed Mrs. Spoopendyke, doing the fate of her decorations with distress. "I can't!" yelled Mr. Spoopendyke, letting two more in the effort to keep his hat on. "Who is it? Get hold of that representative 'the day we celebrate,' and Mr. Spoopendyke, clutching wildly at a sailing pot, not a little scared particularly for the flower, but he had felt his drops on his foot, and he felt more fears. "Dadgad the pot," he squawked, as it ended him, and landed on his best coat.

"Thank you're real mean!" sobbed Mrs. Spoopendyke, surveying the wreck with streaming eyes.

"You didn't do it!" heaved Mrs. Spoopendyke, who did as easily as his wife did now that it was all over. "I hope you had some sort of a notion that those pots would fall when I got 'em! Why didn't you put me a strong sash when you could carry 'em without dropping 'em? What do you want of decorations anyway?"

"Because to-morrow's Easter, and I wanted to help to make the church pretty," and with this explanation Mrs. Spoopendyke broke down completely and wept bitterly.

"What's that? just as much Easter out-door as it is in the church?" demanded Mr. Spoopendyke. "And haven't you decorated as much as any woman? What'd you expect? Folk people are going to take you for a cuthroat just because you take a few shrubs to church once a year? Now you go into the house and don't let me hear any more whining. With your notions about duty and your desire to get the best of the other women in the church, you only want to be in your moth and a black collar, be a whole grub!"

And with this benediction Mr. Spoopendyke started off to see Specklewetle and make some arrangement with him for going fishing as soon as the trout ponds should show signs of breaking up.

Tim and the Lawyer.

"Have you had a job to-day, Tim?" inquired a well known legal gentleman of the equally well known, jolly florid faced old drayman, who, rain or shine, summer or winter, is rarely absent from his post in front of the Michigan Exchange.

"I had, I did, sir." "How many?" "Only two, sir." "How much did you get for both?" "Seventy cents! How in the world do you expect to live and keep a horse on seventy cents a day?"

"Some days I have half a dozen jobs, sir; but business has been dull to-day, sir. Only the hauling of a thrum for a gentleman for forty cents, an' a load of furniture for thirty cents; and there was the pots an' the kettle, an' the divil only knows what; a big load, sir."

"Do you carry big loads of household goods for thirty cents?"

"She was a poor widow, sir, an' had n more to give me. I took all she had, and loaded her, a lawyer could have done no better than that, sir."

And old Tim won the first fall.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

Magnificent Palace Sleeping Cars will be run daily between Winnipeg and Regina.

"I hope you won't break any of them," sighed Mrs. Spoopendyke. Then she pulled him over his eyes and took him by the hand to lead him away.

"Please out!" yelled Mr. Spoopendyke, as he ran a long way. "Here's a decoration in here! Catch it if you don't want to lose a dozen of this decoration. Catch it, catch it!"

The Mrs. Spoopendyke was too late. The pot dropped with a crash on Mr. Spoopendyke's instep and rolled into the other.

"There you are," noted Mr. Spoopendyke, dropping with pain and dropping another pot, satisfied now. "Know any one you want to look against for a Garden of Eden? Got any more horticultural societies you want knocked out?" Here goes another! and the rest of the series crashed on the sidewalk. "A charge I have to keep," and down came the largest pot of the lot with a prodigious bang.

"Dang it!" squealed Mrs. Spoopendyke, doing the fate of her decorations with distress.

"I can't!" yelled Mr. Spoopendyke, letting two more in the effort to keep his hat on.

"Who is it? Get hold of that representative 'the day we celebrate,' and Mr. Spoopendyke, clutching wildly at a sailing pot, not a little scared particularly for the flower, but he had felt his drops on his foot, and he felt more fears. "Dadgad the pot," he squawked, as it ended him, and landed on his best coat.

"Thank you're real mean!" sobbed Mrs. Spoopendyke, surveying the wreck with streaming eyes.

"You didn't do it!" heaved Mrs. Spoopendyke, who did as easily as his wife did now that it was all over. "I hope you had some sort of a notion that those pots would fall when I got 'em! Why didn't you put me a strong sash when you could carry 'em without dropping 'em? What do you want of decorations anyway?"

"Because to-morrow's Easter, and I wanted to help to make the church pretty," and with this explanation Mrs. Spoopendyke broke down completely and wept bitterly.

"What's that? just as much Easter out-door as it is in the church?" demanded Mr. Spoopendyke. "And haven't you decorated as much as any woman? What'd you expect? Folk people are going to take you for a cuthroat just because you take a few shrubs to church once a year? Now you go into the house and don't let me hear any more whining. With your notions about duty and your desire to get the best of the other women in the church, you only want to be in your moth and a black collar, be a whole grub!"

And with this benediction Mr. Spoopendyke started off to see Specklewetle and make some arrangement with him for going fishing as soon as the trout ponds should show signs of breaking up.

"Now, my star," said Mrs. Spoopendyke, gathering up her skirts and shaking for the door: "now, my dear, we are all ready, are we? You take those pots of plants and I'll carry the cut flowers."

"How'm I to take thirteen pots of plants in two hands?" growled Mr. Spoopendyke, surveying his job with dissatisfaction in his eyes.

"What is there about me that seems to give you the impression that I am a freight train? What do you call these things, anyway? What's this ghost standing up here with a candle in his hand? What particular interest has he got in the Easter business? How'm I going to carry these things? That's what I want to know."

"That's a silly lily, dear," replied Mrs. Spoopendyke, laying down her flowers and running to help her husband. "Now, you can take these pots in your arms by letting the edge of one pot rest on the edge of another. Let me show you," and Mrs. Spoopendyke arranged the pots, neatly folded in clean white paper, in her husband's arms. "That's the way to carry them," she chattered, opening the door for him. "Now, you are all right."

"Spare me to put on my hat with my hands, dear!" implored Mr. Spoopendyke, trying to speak seriously so that he might not attract the butler. "I hope you think I'd present a more tropical appearance without my hat?"

"I'll put on your hat, my dear," replied Mrs. Spoopendyke, and she carefully put on his side, buttoned and buttoned it down and the "ghost shrub" as she called it, rested on his shoulders. "Now you're all right, dear, beautiful of the flowers."

Mr. Spoopendyke followed his wife to the staircase and the butler a sort of hush to himself.

"Please look here," he cried to his wife, "you don't look we straight! These things are slipping! Fix 'em can't you?"

"We haven't far to go," pleaded Mrs. Spoopendyke, who couldn't see that anything was wrong. "I hope you won't break any of them," sighed Mrs. Spoopendyke. Then she pulled him over his eyes and took him by the hand to lead him away.

A TEAM belonging to Mr. Edgar ran away on Saturday evening between four and five o'clock. They started from some distance up 12th street and on reaching Besser turned and ran a short distance past the post office at a furious rate before they could be stopped. They were started by the bottom boards of the wagon riding against the horses' legs. There were two men in the wagon and at one time they had the horses nearly under subjection when one of them made a sudden spring and broke his whiffle-tree. One of the young men jumped but fell too near the wagon and a wheel passed over one of his hands. The other was thrown out and hit on his head, but owing to the elasticity of his neck or some other cause, he escaped without serious injury.

A CREDIT TO ITS MAKERS.

The new "Beehive" Hook and Ladder Truck.

Messrs. McKenzie & Russell have just completed for the Brandon Fire Brigade, a splendid hook and ladder truck, which was shown to our reporter this afternoon in their large establishment on 6th street. The truck is a fine one, and is in every way a credit to the pushing firm who received the contract. It is 16 feet long, and carries 6 ladders, each suspended on a separate run of rollers, so that any one of them can be removed without interfering with the others. The ladders are 12, 14, 18, 24 and 40 feet, respectively, and are painted white with blue ends, the body and wheels of the truck painted in vermilion and gold, and the gearing is painted in lake and gold, which is a pretty effect. The truck carries besides the ladders, four axes, four hooks, two crowbars and six buckets. Over the front of the truck is a large, handsome head lamp, mounted in a niche and surmounted by a brass gilt, and in the rear is hung a large bell, spiral spring. The buckets are substantial and are calculated to withstand any amount of rough usage.

The ladders and all its appurtenances except the lantern and a few sundries were made in the well equipped factory of Messrs. McKenzie and Russell, and will be a lasting monument in the city of what pluck and pluckless accomplishment. This firm have in the past gained an enviable reputation for turning out nothing but the best and the truck just finished is no less than sustains their well earned reputation. The painting was executed by Mr. Wm. Taylor and is a credit to him in every way.

Piscatorial Recreations.

On Saturday evening last two carriages, each containing several gentlemen, left the city on a piscatorial expedition to the country. They arrived at their destination nearly about the same time, but neither party was aware of the presence of the other until early Sunday morning. One party, which to avoid confusion, we shall designate No. 1, didn't swear and succeeded in catching a large quantity of fish, but Party No. 2, (they must have used profane language) were not so evidently successful. At about ten o'clock Party No. 1, who were determined to have a good time, started for a church, which they observed in the distance, and where Sunday School exercises were being held, leaving the fish which they had caught in their wagon. While Party No. 1 were enjoying the novelty of a Sunday School in a first-class running order, those of the second party hereinbefore mentioned, crept stealthily along the bank of the river and purloined the fish belonging to those of the first party. When Party No. 1, returned to their tents, and discovered that they had been robbed by the bold, fat Pharisees of the second party, they were exceeding wrath, and fell upon the ground weeping and wailing and gnashing their teeth, and used very unparliamentary language when referring to the robbers. They, at last decided upon the line of action they would take, which was that they would enter the camps of the Pharisees, while they slept, and carry back their own fish together with those caught by their enemies. This they did, and when Party No. 2, awoke they also thristed forgone, but after communing amongst themselves decided on returning home, and, after arriving here, some time after dark, it is to be presumed merely out of mischief, secreted a set of harness that were hung up in a livery stable, and which belonged to a gentleman who kept his horses there. The proprietor of the livery stable will have to make good to the owner of the harness the amount which they were valued at, $65.

WINNIEG ROWING CLUB

Arrival of New Boats from Toronto Preparations for the First Race.

The two boats ordered from Warren, of Toronto, arrived last Saturday in perfect order, and are acknowledged by all who have seen them to surpass any previous work turned out by this maker. The cars, rowlocks and rigging are everything that can be desired, and after boats have been thoroughly tested, were pronounced perfect.

The two crews that are in training for the race to-morrow are now been working morning and evening since the arrival of the boats, and as the men are all veteran oarsmen, and in very good form, an exciting and well contested race may be expected. The crews are composed as follows: No. 1 Boat-Patten, bow; J. Galt, No. 2; Van Allan, No. 3; G. F. Galt, stroke; No. 2 Boat-Armstrong, bow; Metk, No. 2; Stinson, No. 3; Healy, stroke. Owing to the rain yesterday afternoon the committee was unable to make the final arrangements. It is intended, however, to have a mile race, starting from up the stream and finishing as close to the Broadway bridge as possible. By doing this the spectators will have a good view of the last half, which is always the best, by taking up their position on the bridge on either bank of the river near it.

OTTAWA, June 5.—The demand for ammunition manufactured at the Government cartridge factory in Quebec, from the several rifle associations of Canada, as well as from private individuals, is greater than can be supplied at present. The ammunition is pronounced equal if not superior, to any yet imported from Woolwich arsenal.
